

I am opposed to the use of cell phones on aircraft unless the airlines will provide sound-proof booths which must be occupied for their use. Smoking is not allowed on airplanes to protect fellow passengers. The same reasoning supports the ban on the use of cell phones. People use the time on aircraft to do many things including reading, working, relaxing or sleeping. Cell phone users have already shown their disregard for the rights of those surrounding them. It would be patently unfair to expose captive passengers to the conversations of cell phone users. I am a cell phone user but I attempt to hold my conversations out of the hearing range of others and I do not feel a need to be able to use the phone on the plane.
